Collective identities and group solidarities in the late Middle Ages.

During the IMMLleida, we want to emphasise a specific objective: Collective identities and group solidarities in the late Middle Ages.

In Middle Ages, humans were never alone. Men and women in the Middle Ages only have meaning within a collectivity, as a form of group solidarity and collective identity, whether it is the senatorial bond, the village, the town, the nation... Over the last few years, historiography has deepened our knowledge of collective identities and group solidarity. It is a good time to review the current state of research in IMMLleida.
